Forecast For Strathclyde
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Thursday 28 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Periods of rain, initially turning wintry to quite low levels.

Today:
An overcast day with periods of rain, which falls as sleet and snow during the morning and perhaps early afternoon to quite low levels. Easterly winds fresh to strong at first across western coasts and Isles. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Tonight:
Rain south of Central belt occasionally turning heavy. Elsewhere area of generally light, patchy rain, falling as sleet and snow to quite low levels in Argyll. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Friday:
Area of rain, falling as sleet and snow in Argyll, slowly and erratically clearing southwards to bring dry and bright end to the day. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Mainly dry, bright, but cold with widespread frost. However a chance of periods of rain, snow spreading from southwest at times Sunday and Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.